not found I'm running Adobe After Effects CC 2014 on a windows 7 system 64bit. I'm trying to add a CS6 project to this installation. It is running fine but everytime I try to add a css file or stylesheet it fails saying amtlib.dll was not found. I am running the 64bit OS. I've looked through other threads here and I've tried to: Add the libraries to the Adobe directory located in C:\Program Files\Adobe\Adobe After Effects CC 2014 Create a symbolic link pointing to C:\Program Files\Adobe\Adobe After Effects CC 2014\amtlib.dll Restart computer Nothing seems to work. Any thoughts? Any further help is appreciated. Thank you. A: In my case Adobe added the dll in the wrong folder. Where it was pointing to is the Adobe Shared\amtlib.dll, if you delete this folder and open the installation folder and make the symbolic link again, it will work. Pages Thursday, May 14, 2012 Thursday Thirteen - Next chapter! And that is the end of this story. It's been a good ride, but I think it's time for me to move on to other projects. But, what projects? Next story is going to be written by my buddy Gary Marti. Gary lives about thirty-five miles away from me in a little city in Texas named Oasis. He and I went to school together (seven years) and have been friends since. His wife, Kari, and I have been friends as well. While I've known Gary for many years, I'm really looking forward to sharing a great friendship with him. Gary and I have been discussing a story and I'm excited that he's going to write it for me. I'm even more excited that I can write along side Gary and we'll take turns with each chapter. Gary has been taking his time in working on the chapter, so he doesn't have any chapters in writing yet. I'm not telling you anything about this story except for the fact that it will involve a sports team and a man that will determine the fate of the team. And, just as important, he will determine the fate of the man. Right now, I'm thinking of some of my writing projects and decided that I'm going to write a short story about 82157476af
